

ADVERTISEMENT

The WellHouse breaks ground, soon to house women rescued from sex trafficking

By WBRC Staff

Published: Oct. 25, 2016 at 12:40 AM CDT

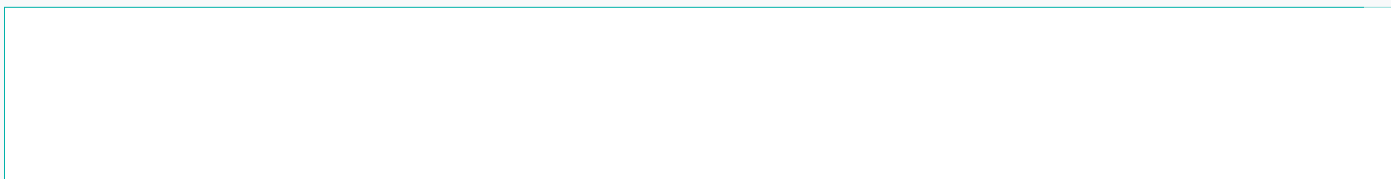

BIRMINGHAM, AL (WBRC) - The WellHouse broke ground Monday on 65 acres of land just outside of Birmingham.

This establishment will provide help for women who have been rescued from sex trafficking.

The property will eventually house two shelters, a community center, trauma center and homes for women with children working to regain a sense of security in the aftermath of human trafficking.

"The property is beautiful, it's serene. I mean it's obvious that God's presence is in that place. And we just can't wait to get our legs out there," said Tajuan McCarty, WellHouse founder.

ADVERTISEMENT

The Wellhouse also hopes to have a home for children who have been trafficked by next year.

Copyright 2016 WBRC. All rights reserved.